"Choro de Estamira" was composed as a kind of response to the movie "Estamira", by Marcos Prado.

"'Estamira' tells the story of a 63 year-old woman who suffers from schizophrenia. Estamira has lived and worked for the past 20 years at the waste disposal site of Jardim Gramacho in Rio de Janeiro. With a poetic, philosophical and eloquent discourse, Estamira lives for the mission that was set upon her: to reveal and to reclaim the truth." (From the official synopsis of the film)

The musical piece, in turn, is a tentative to suggest Estamira, her speech, ideas and her mind. The suggestion is made through extrapolation of two materials, one from music and another from sociology metaphorical thoughts: a) one choro by Jacob do Bandolim, called "Tatibitate" (stutter talking); b) the stuttering, itself, in an allusion to the suffered Estamira's life as a metaphor of the third world general situation.

Thus, the piece deal with stuttering situations (in the universe of sounds or not), with regards to processes involving repetition (and variation) in a extreme way, adulterating the choro style and the Jacob do Bandolim composition, the principal source of musical material to the piece "Choro de Estamira".
